ABOUT THE SEMINAR :

In the 21st century, data has emerged as a vital economic, social, and technological resource. Databases whether in the form of scientific research repositories, business analytics systems, AI training datasets, or public information archives constitute the backbone of digital innovation. With the increasing reliance on data-intensive technologies such as artificial intelligence, machine learning, and big data analytics, the legal protection of databases has gained unprecedented significance.

For India, this conversation is particularly timely. The Government of India's vision of Viksit Bharat 2047 to make India a fully developed nation by the 100th anniversary of Independence places digital transformation, knowledge economy, and innovation-driven growth at the heart of national development. Databases, data sovereignty, and their legal governance form critical pillars in this roadmap. Protecting and facilitating innovation in the database ecosystem will not only enhance India's competitiveness in AI, science, healthcare, agriculture, and digital governance but also ensure equitable access to knowledge for inclusive growth.
